OF ETHELRED. 327 Under jSlthelred nothing was done; or, more truly, Chap. v. throughout his whole reign, he left undone those things which he ought to have done, and he did those things which he ought not to have done. For the fault of.$!thelred, after all, was not mere weak-Character ness.1 The Unready King showed occasional glimpses of, . vigor. vigour which might for a moment remind men that he?u lways came of the same stock as Eadward the Unconquered wrong and as thelstan the Glorious. But it was a vigour which came only by fits and starts, which acted only at unfitting times and for unfitting objects. As far as we can judge by his actions, his character was not one of mere abject incapacity like Edward of Caernarvon. He was rather like Richard of Bourdeaux, idle, careless, governed by worthless favourites, but showing...
